

Landon Sawyer

07/18/06

A shining star has left this life.

Jordan Chiovarelli, 23, lived as a constant source of energy and laughter for his family and friends. The world lost Jordan's bright exuberance in a motorcycle accident in Rosyln, Long Island on Monday night, July 17, 2006.

The skiing world, Jordan's many friends, and family feel the tremendous loss by Jordan's sudden absence. Jordan leaves a legacy of friendship, unparalleled talent, and love.

Jordan Chiovarelli lived with an enthusiasm and passion for life rarely seen. His wit and good nature lightened each situation in which he was involved. He lived with a sense of stalwart self-worth and an independent spirit that inspired everyone around him. Jordan constantly entertained his family, friends, and those around him with a supreme talent for enlivening circumstances, turning even dull moments into adventures.

Jordan pursued skiing with the same passion and exuberance with which he lived his life. His legacy will live on as a superb ski athlete, having an almost super-human knack at dominating a competitive field, seemingly from out of the blue. Images of Jordan cascading through a mogul course, at the brink of control but with a fluid effortlessness will remain etched into the annals of time, as will his numerous accomplishments and accolades. Jordan was at the peak of his competitive skiing career, having spent numerous years on the US Development Ski Team, he was on the brink of breaking through to the World Cup level.

Jordan's positive example, sense of humor and warmth of heart will live on through each of us.

We miss you Jordan.